Dozens vented on Twitter their experiences with racism in Boston after a local woman tweeted she was called the N-word. 4-5

There is also racism as simple as cab drivers ignoring you and picking up the white people.

I went to look at an apartment and it was amazing. Said I would come back the next day with my fiancé. They wouldn't even let us in when we got there and they saw he was black. They were Italian immigrants. The irony was not lost. That day I vowed to never be silent.

THINGS TO

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT, REPORTER

It's no secret that plenty of people have experienced racism in Boston. But still, with a reputation as a progressive city in the north, it seems that Boston's racism can go overlooked or ignored. A few things have dragged Bostonians' behavior into the spotlight, though, like last summer's Red Sox game in which a crowd member called Adam Jones the N-word. Now people are taking to Twitter to share their stories of experiencing racism in Boston after one woman tweeted her most recent tale. Read more inside and at metro.boston.us.

WELCOME TO
METRO BOSTONMASSACHUSETTS VOTER REGISTRATION DEADLINE

If the Massachusetts 2018 primary is coming up fast. If you want to cast a ballot in that election, you'll have to first make sure your voter registration status is good to go. The 2018 primary election is on Tuesday, Sept. 4. Voters across the commonwealth will take to the polls that day to pick the candidates they want to represent their party in the Massachusetts general election on Nov. 6. Candidates will be vying for the chance to appear on their party's ballot for one Senate seat and nine House seats, all of which are currently held by Democrats. Residents will also get the chance to vote on candidates for the race for governor, a title currently held by Republican Charlie Baker, as well as a few other positions such as lieutenant governor, attorney general and secretary of state. But before you can head to the polls, you need to register to vote. The last day to register to vote in Massachusetts in order to cast a ballot in the state's 2018 primary election is Aug. 15, according to Secretary of the Commonwealth William F. Galvin's office.

PROSECUTORS REST CASE AGAINST MANAFORT

2 U.S. prosecutors on Monday rested their case against former Trump campaign chairman Paul Manafort after 10 days of testimony alleging how he avoided taxes on at least $16 million of income and lied to banks to maintain an extravagant lifestyle once his work for pro-Kremlin politicians in Ukraine dried up. More than two dozen witnesses painted a picture of Manafort, 69, as a lavish spender with little regard for the law. A political consultant in the Ukraine, Manafort stashed his money in 31 undisclosed offshore bank accounts, and skirted taxes on that income by wiring it directly to vendors to snap up real estate, bespoke suits, cars and antique rugs, the witnesses said. It is unclear whether Manafort's lawyers will call any witnesses, and legal experts say it is highly unlikely that Manafort himself will take the stand. Closing statements could take place as early as Tuesday, after which the 12-person jury will begin deliberations. If found guilty on all charges, Manafort could face eight to 10 years in prison based on federal sentencing guidelines, according to sentencing expert Justin Paperny.

FLOODING IN GREATER BOSTON

3 Luan Smergaku, 31, of Salem stands in the center of flooded Boston Street in Lynn, MA, as he waits for a tow truck to come for his car. Smergaku got stuck in the floodwaters as he was commuting home from work. Torrential rains that flooded roads, caused a train to derail and stranded cars throughout Greater Boston this past weekend threw an especially hard punch at the North Shore.

POLS VENT OVER CRUM-BLING ALEWIFE GARGAGE

4 A trio of state lawmakers on Monday pressed transit officials over the condition of the parking garage at the MBTA's Alewife Station, which reopened in the morning after deteriorating concrete forced a weekend shutdown for repairs and assessment. Saying she was representing "an incredibly angry group of towns," Sen. Cindy Friedman, an Arlington Democrat, called on the MBTA to detail its plans for the Cambridge garage, roll back a planned parking fee increase, and in general "do a much better job of communicating with us. "Have you looked at the Alewife station? It's being held up by hydraulic jacks. It has been for years," Friedman said at a meeting of the T's Fiscal and Management Control Board. "It floods. It's disgustingly dirty, you can't find somebody there to help you, a T employee — we assume they've all been reassigned — and it is in such a state of disrepair that people are frankly scared to go there, and yet it is the only place to park if you take the Red Line from those west and northwestern suburbs, so we are really in a crunch here."

LA LIGA MAKES LANDMARK
DEAL WITH FB IN INDIA

5 Spain's top-flight soccer division La Liga announced on Tuesday a landmark deal with Facebook that will allow viewers in the Indian subcontinent to watch every game over the next three seasons free of charge on the social network. A statement from La Liga said all 380 league matches for the new season, which begins on Friday, would be available to viewers in India, Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Nepal, Maldives, Sri Lanka and Pakistan. "We are really happy to be on a free-to-air service in such an important territory as the Indian subcontinent," Alfredo Bermejo, La Liga's head of digital strategy, told Reuters ahead of the announcement. "One of our goals for the last two years has been to offer content to the widest audience possible, so partnering with free platforms like Facebook, which has 270 million users in India, is key to us." Facebook and La Liga declined to give the price of the deal, which sees the social network giant unseat Sony Pictures Network as the rights holder in the region. Sony paid a reported $32 million for the right to broadcast La Liga between 2014 and 2018.

Tweet about racist encounter sparks dozens of similar stories

A woman tweeted about how she was called the N-word in Boston, and dozens of other people shared stories of experiencing racism in the so-called progressive city.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Is Boston racist? Plenty of signs point to yes. The city has been called out many times for being home to a number of racist acts, from a Fenway crowd member calling Baltimore Orioles outfielder Adam Jones the N-word last summer to comedian Michael Che saying Boston is "the most racist city" he has ever been to.

Now another spotlight is shining on racism in Boston after a Twitter user shared her experience and received a flood of responses telling similar stories.

On Thursday, Twitter user @hodayum told her most recent tale of experiencing racism in Boston.

"I got called a stupid [N word] in broad daylight today in BOSTON because i bumped into a man and he dropped his donuts," she tweeted. "Homie had a Bernie sanders sticker on his car. Welcome to America. White men are trash. Thank you for coming to my ted talk."

The tweet instantly struck a chord, receiving more than 1,700 responses, 23,000 retweets and 138,000 likes as of Monday afternoon.

In response, people began sharing their own stories of encountering racism in Boston. Many direct messaged @hodayum privately, she said on Twitter, and she shared screenshots of their messages while cropping out their names.

"Worked at an ad agency in Boston for two years under a creative director who referred to any black male as 'Tiger' for 'Tiger Woods,'" one message read. "Most of these black men were disappeared from the agency under fishy circumstances. Writeups for nonexistent offenses, Performance Improvement Plans... Bottom line, if you're a person of color and you can get out of there, get out."

This message continued to say that there is "no middle class in greater Boston for reasons that have nothing to do with lack of qualified applicants for the good jobs in town. Just racism."

ton is $8, according to a Boston Globe Spotlight series on racism. "That means they owe almost as much as the combined value of what they own, be it a car, or house, or savings," the report read.

In contrast, white households in the Boston area have a net worth of $247,500, per the Spotlight team.

Racism in Boston: Why is it so prevalent? That reply was just one of dozens Twitter user @hodayum said she got in response to her initial tweet about experiencing racism in Boston. People told stories of being called racial slurs when offering help to strangers, of being ignored by cab drivers and of not seeing any people of color in certain neighborhoods.

"I can sum up my experience at a private liberal arts school in Boston in one anecdote," one response read. "A guy in my class asked his poc professor if he ever considered 'just pretending racism doesn't exist,' and when I spoke up to correct him a white girl just cut me off to explain it herself."

Some people called out how many believe Boston and Massachusetts overall are more progressive areas, meaning this racism is often ignored or overlooked.

According to a 2017

report by the Southern Poverty Law Center, Massachusetts is home to the most hate groups out of any state in New England.

To those who have experienced racism in Boston, the area's progressive reputation is a fallacy. It can be worse than the South, they say, since "the South was forced to reckon with its racism in ways other parts of the country were not."

Mayor Marty Walsh has previously hosted community discussions about racism in Boston and in 2017, released a strategy of efforts to address racial inequalities in Boston.

"Boston's Resilience Strategy is focused on ensuring every resident can reach their full potential regardless of their background, and removing the barriers of systemic racism that hinder Bostonians from having access to opportunities," according to the mayor's office.

As for all those responses Twitter user @hodayum has received? She might not stop with that Twitter thread. She said that she may start a blog to chronicle stories of racism in Boston, as well as her own experiences growing up here. She did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

Documentary

Foo Fighters frontman Dave Grohl does not like to rest. Now he's decided to experiment and do something he's been planning for years. "Play," a two-part mini documentary directed by the 49-year-old, is about to be released. Its first part opens with a behind-the-scenes discussion about the love of playing music. And the second part features the recording of a single man playing the instruments live.

of August is the date when "Play" will be available on digital platforms. The vinyl version will be released on Sept. 28.

Q&A

DAVE GROHL, musician

Did you need more memory or concentration for this?

I had to memorize this 23-minute instrumental. It was really to see if I could pull it off, if I could do that. ... It looks like I did it. I set up a lot of instruments with several drum kits, a guitar load, bass and rhythm.

Do you think that's crazy?

At first it sounded ridiculous. It took several hours of sleep away from me during the Foo Fighters tour. This question was always on my mind: Why do it? But I like crazy things, challenges and, above all, having fun.

What was your motivation?

Watching my daughters learn to sing and play drums made me go back in time to when I was their age and listened to albums. As I took their lessons, I saw classrooms filled with children who are really struggling to understand; in the end, you are always looking for the next challenge and ways to improve.

'Murphy Brown' will make a splash when it returns

From President Donald Trump to the #MeToo movement, the revival will cover it all. ANDREW HUSBAND

"Murphy Brown" returns Sept. 27 at 9:30 p.m. on CBS. ALL PHOTOS CBS

The popular CBS sitcom "Murphy Brown" ran for 10 seasons, from Nov. 14, 1988, to May 18, 1998. Created by Diane English and starring Candice Bergen, the show followed the latter's titular character, an investigative reporter and anchor of the fictional news program "FYI," as she navigated the wide world of the news media.

This past January, CBS revealed that English, Bergen and most of the series' original cast would return for a "Murphy Brown" revival. Slated to premiere Sept. 27, the reboot will almost perfectly commemorate the program's 30th anniversary, all while thrusting Brown and company into a brand-new world rife with 24-hour cable news channels, social media and other perilous pitfalls.

Following the principal cast and crew's presentation at the recent Television Critics Association summer preview, far more is known about what the "Murphy Brown" revival will entail.

Brown has her own show
Instead of retaining her duties as host of the "FYI" program, Brown now heads her own a.m. news show, "Murphy in the Morning." Entertainment Weekly revealed the show-within-a-show's set in late January, when the magazine published exclusive photos from the revival's first table read with the cast. "It's an incredible thing when you can step away from something you care so much about, and now, 20 years later, it's as if not a day has passed," said English.

#MeToo episode

During the series' TCA panel, reporters asked the cast and crew about the allegations of sexual misconduct against CBS CEO Leslie Moonves unearthed by reporter Ronan Farrow. English's response? "I just want to say on behalf of everybody on our show, we take the allegations of sexual conduct extremely seriously," she said. "So seriously that we actually developed an episode about the #MeToo movement many months ago."

As for the allegations against Moonves specifically, English said the show "[supports] the investigation fully," adding: "None of us had a negative experience like that at CBS. We never experienced any kind of sexual misconduct. No one on my crew has." Oh, and the #MeToo episode's title? "#Murphy-Too."

President Trump's attacks on the press. Unsurprisingly, President Trump's seemingly unending line of attack against the press, typically dubbed "fake news" whenever the particular outlet or story is critical of him, is having an effect on "Murphy Brown." As Bergen explained at TCA, "The news now, thanks to our president, is in constant turmoil. I think it will be reassuring to see Murphy sticking up for the press and sticking up to the president."

As for the very real possibility that the show's positive focus on the news media may draw Trump's ire, Bergen and company are readying themselves. "I don't know what the reaction will be, and I'm trying to brace myself," said the star.

DANNY

Listen to "The Danny Picard Show" at dannypicard.com. Follow him on Twitter @dannypicard

Certainly, after all these years, you wouldn't expect Bill Belichick to find a diamond in the rough before the start of a season. There's no way the Patriots would ever be able to bring somebody in during training camp and turn him into an impact player during the upcoming season.

So, what, am I supposed to believe that wide receiver Eric Decker is going to gain the trust of Tom Brady in such a short period of time and have immediate success with this offense?

I just hope you can sense my sarcasm.

Of course, I expect Belichick to make a move like this. And I absolutely believe that Decker can be an impact player on the Patriots' offense. In fact, I'll be more surprised if the Decker signing doesn't work out for New England.

The Patriots signed

Decker to a one-year deal last week, reportedly worth a max value of $2.1 million at a cap hit of $1.5 million. If he shows he doesn't belong, then it would only cost the Pats $75,000, which is the guaranteed money in the deal.

So it's a low-risk, high-reward deal. But it's one that I expect to pay off for both sides.

Decker turned 31 in March. He's coming off a season with the Tennessee Titans in which he had 54 receptions for 563 yards and only one touchdown in all 16 regular-season games. That came after three years with the New York Jets.

While he was with the Jets, his former team, the Denver Broncos, won a Super Bowl. When Decker was with the Broncos for the first four seasons of his NFL career, he went to the Super Bowl in the 2013 season, only to have one reception for six yards in a 43-8 loss to the Seattle Seahawks.

Decker wanted to play for a contender. And no better place for him to go than to Foxboro.

The Patriots are the favorite to win Super Bowl LIII. But they're also in need of a wide receiver, especially for the first four weeks of the season, when Julian Edelman will be serving his four-game PED suspension.

And with Jordan Matthews getting injured and then released, there's even more of an opportunity for Decker to play a key role in Brady's passing attack.

There's always the possibility that, by the time you read this, Decker has been cut.

Eric Decker dressed in a Pats uniform for the first time last week. GETTY IMAGES

Then we'd all say, "At least they gave it a shot." But for that to happen, it would mean Decker either wasn't in football shape, or he wasn't motivated enough to absorb the Patriot Way.

He's only 31, and he's on the record over the summer on SiriusXM saying that he wanted to go somewhere where he can "compete for a Super Bowl and be in a good system."

Check and check. And with a one-year deal, it's clear that Decker is also playing to prove that he's worthy of a multiyear deal into his mid-30s. No better way to do that than by being a key contributor to a Super Bowl contender.

If he has the right mindset — and all indications are that he does — then Brady isn't going to complain about adding an eight-year veteran who has 5,816 career receiving yards and 53 career touchdown receptions.

Regardless of where this relationship between the Patriots and Decker goes, I'm confident their offense will be just fine with Rob Gronkowski and Chris Hogan as Brady's top-two targets until Edelman returns. But if Decker does end up playing an important role, it'll be just another feather in Belichick's cap.

And certainly, after all these years, you couldn't be surprised to see that.

Pats vs. Eagles

The Eagles and their fans have had plenty of smack to talk this offseason after winning Super Bowl LI over New England. No one has had more to say than Eagles tackle Lane Johnson, who called the Pats a "fear-based organization" a few months back. Johnson said he's now psyched to take on the Pats in a preseason game this coming Thursday in Foxboro.

"I'm ready," Johnson told KYW radio. "I've been waiting on this ever since the Super Bowl was over with. It's time."

Aries Think matters through with care. A steady pace and well-planned strategy will help you avoid an unexpected setback. A partnership will bring out the best in you.

Taurus Before you make a move, get all your paperwork ready. Don't leave anything to chance if you want to avoid a run-in with officials. Opportunity will knock, which makes preparation essential.

Gemini Time spent socializing or networking will pay off. Your charm and playful attitude will attract both personal and professional interest. Romance is encouraged, along with personal improvements.

Cancer Broaden your interests and learn more about the people with whom you are doing business. Knowing what you are up against will make getting what you want easier.

Leo Keep your distance from anyone who tends to overreact or bullies you into something you don't want to do. Change begins within, so make every move count. Follow your heart, not someone else's lead.

Virgo Don't take no for an answer. If you put in the time, the progress you make will prompt others to pitch in and help. Celebrate to honor your hard work and accomplishment.

Libra Be careful with whom you share your thoughts and feelings. Some people will support and assist you, and others will meddle in your affairs. Wise choices will ward off a dispute.

Scorpio Do what's best for you. Don't let anyone take over your affairs or decisions. Own what you do and bring about changes that will encourage personal gains.

Sagittarius Put your plans in motion. If you stand up for what you feel is important, you will get the necessary backing to get things up and running. Romance is on the rise.

Capricorn A romantic situation or an involvement with a close friend or relative will be difficult. Aim to stabilize your life by making clear changes to the way you live.

Aquarius If you look good, you'll feel good. Time spent indulging yourself, exercising, eating right and trying to be the best you can be will lift your spirits. Romance is highlighted.

Pisces A professional change or the way you approach your responsibilities will have a big effect. Use your ingenuity to come up with an efficient way to get things done.
